Selangor's position as Malaysia's most successful state economically has seen an influx of workers from throughout the country setting up home here, as well as being a magnet for expatriates in a broad range of fields from the manufacturing, educational, business and financial sectors having made the state their abode. This collection of people from beyond Selangor, and from around the world has seen a natural desire for a taste of home on their part, thus resulting in the availability of both local and imported cuisines throughout the state.

It is as such no surprise that visitors to Selangor will find a veritable smorgasbord of cuisines from which to savour, and ranging from simple, yet scrumptious hawker fare, to restaurants with many of these restaurants are well patronised by locals, and a sure sign of excellent food; all the way to superlative haute cuisine of international standards, and all at truly affordable prices.

So come explore Selangor and be sure to fill both your soul and stomach in equal measure, as you'll find that one simply complements the other for a great holiday.

Origins of Selangor Food

In its most fundamental form, cuisine in Selangor can be attributed to the rich cultural milieu that made up the state from earliest times and which included the Javanese, Malay and Chinese communities, with many examples of what is generally now accepted as traditional Selangor cuisine including dishes such as Sambal Tuan and Pecal (a bean and vegetable salad), that was brought over by early Javanese immigrants. Over time and through the states interaction with former colonial powers including the Dutch and the British, who while introducing their culinary preferences to the locals, also brought in workers from the sub continent, with local taste buds responding enthusiastically to these newfound flavours. Today, Javanese, Malay, Chinese and Indian dishes have become accepted as very much a part and parcel of most Malaysians daily fare, with every dish enjoyed with as much relish and delight as another.

Cuisine in Selangor is therefore very much an amalgamation of these many influences. Chicken Rice, for example, while largely attributed to the Hainanese Chinese can easily be found sold by the Malays as Nasi Ayam. Roti canai, accompanied by a savoury gravy, or dal, and said to be of South Indian origin is also often made by the Malay community, and the list goes on. Immigrants from the region have also contributed their fair share of delicious fare with cakes and desserts such as Bahulu Kemboja (Cambodia) and Wadai Kepeng, a traditional Banjarese cake served with a sweet sauce made from coconut milk and brown sugar.

Nevertheless, Javanese and Malay culinary influences remain the dominant choice insofar as Selangor cuisine is concerned. But regardless of one's personal culinary preferences, travelling through Selangor and savouring its diverse dishes is a must, as appreciating local flavours is an important aspect in allowing one to better understand local culture, and the warm and welcoming nature of its residents.

Refreshing Picks

Possibly one of the most delightful, yet confusing decisions travellers will have to make is on the vast array of kuih-muih, or cakes and sweets, available in Selangor, and deciding which other ones to pick, in addition to tried and tested favourites. But it is a good problem, as they say, with only your appetite being a limiting factor. So after you've done the basics like Kuih Koci, Kuih Lopes, Ketayap and Kuih Cara, do try some of the many other varieties available throughout your sojourn in Selangor.

KUIH KOCI

This steamed, banana leaf wrapped dessert is made of glutinous rice flour and filled with a sweet coconut and palm sugar mixture.

KUIH LOPES

Steamed glutinous rice usually shaped into a triangle is coated in grated coconut and drizzled with palm sugar syrup.

KUIH KETAYAP

Delicious pandan infused crepes filled with a coconut and palm sugar mix reminiscent of spring rolls, except that these are sweet.

KUIH CARA BERLAUK

These bite sized savoury treats are cooked in round or flower shaped molds, and usually topped with sauteed minced meat, shallots and green onions.

PISANG GORENG

An enduring local favourite, the battered and deep-fried banana fritter is often made from several varieties of the fruit.

CEKODOK

A fried fritter typically made from a batter and often with mashed bananas, this snack can also be made with anchovies, or onions.

CURRY PUFF

This savoury pastry can be filled with a variety of ingredients including curried beef, chicken, sardines or just potatoes and is usually deep fried.

KELEDEK

Often found sold alongside Pisang Goreng, the keledek, or sweet potato fritter is another local tea time favourite.

Traditionally From Selangor

Kuih, or cakes and snacks, both sweet and savoury, can be found at almost every corner and street in Selangor, and easily recognised by the iconic giant wok and large trays of piping-hot goodies. Kuih stalls are the pillars of local snack foods in Malaysia and offer a variety of desserts and tea-time bites that you simply must try.

BAHULU KEMBOJA

This is a tea cake made in a flower or other decorative shaped mold and baked until slightly crispy around the edges. Made of eggs, sugar and flour and typically with the essence of daun pandan, or pandanus leaves added.

PUNTEN

A Javanese dish made from mashed cooked rice, coconut milk and salt and shaped into an oval, this savoury delicacy is often served with spicy sambal on the side.

Surprising Selangor!

NASI AMBENG

A rice dish traditionally accompanied with a variety of dishes including but not limited to steamed white rice, soy stewed or curried chicken, beef or chicken rendang, a fried sambal, potato fritter and serunding, or a meat floss.

WADAI KEPENG

This traditional boiled cake originated from Banjar and is made from glutinous rice flour shaped into flattened balls and served with a sweet coconut milk sauce and local brown sugar, or Gula Melaka.

SAMBAL TAUN

Also known as Sambal Tahun, this dish dates back to the early Javanese and is characterised by its spiciness from the generous use of birds eye chillies. Often cooked with cows skin, or lungs, it is a hearty dish served during Eid celebrations.
